THE RETURN OF THE CEMENT TILE

Cement - pigments - sand - marble dust; Moroccan cement tiles are handmade tiles, each tile having its own distinct play of color tones, created by those basic earthy ingredients.

The low-cost production method compared to traditional clay tiles, rapidly made the cement tiles the choice for architects in southern Europe around the Mediterranean Sea in the early years of the 20th century.

Contrary to traditional clay tiles, cement tiles are not burned. It strengthens through "curing"; a process of pressing, soaking and drying the tiles over 21 days. The full process has a vast effect on both the aesthetic appearance and the functional strength of the tile. The result is a handmade product, where every tile has a unique, textural expression.

The method of producing cement tiles has its origin in France more than 150 years ago. The special hydraulic pressing technique evolved during the early industrial times, as the power of the new machine-age, combined with the artisan's creative templates, gave new opportunities for creating patterned floors and walls.

In the Nordic region, the cement tiles was produced in the first half of the 20th century. After the Second World War, the cement tiles more or less disappeared, as modern industry began to mass-produce glazed clay tiles at lower costs. The production plants for cement tiles were sold off to former colonies in North Africa, South America and Asia.

ORDERS & DEALERS

REFINED & REDESIGNED

Today, Morocco is the world's leading manufacturer of cement tiles, in small- and medium-scaled workshops all over the country, especially around larger cities such as Marrakech and Fez. There is an estimated number of more than 500 factories producing cement tiles in Morocco.

During the last decade, the cement tiles has seen a revival in Europe, Australia and USA. Marokk, based in Copenhagen, Denmark, contributes to the heritage and renaissance of the cement tiles, by adapting it to the tradition of Scandinavian design, focusing on simplicity, form and function. With a color palette of Nordic tones that embraces the distinct light of the roof of Europe.

Marokk introduces two new formats: the Diamond-tile, a rhombus tile in a large size, 28 x 16 cm. The tile can be laid in one-colored, subtle patterns, or create strong expressive looks and optic illusions, combining three colors. The Stix-tile offers a possibility to make Herringbone-styled floors or walls, with its dimension of 6 x 30,5 cm.

Our tiles are produced by Popham Design in Marrakech, in a quality second-to-none. The factory, owned by the American couple Dowe-Sandes, produces cement tiles in cooperation with local artisans. They have refined the production process with modern technologies in a fine balance with traditions, and produce handmade tiles that are thinner, stronger and with the highest finish.

Adding this to a high ethical way of running the factory, Popham Design is the ideal partner for our vision to bring cement tiles to a new level of contemporary design, with a strong link to its heritage.

In our warehouse in Copenhagen, we stock +1.500 of m² tiles, and ship to countries in northern Europe. For most orders, freight is included.

Marokk stock +1.500 m² of cement tiles in our warehouse in Copenhagen. Due to the large number of varieties of patterns, colors and shapes, some styles are produced to order.

Orders from stock will be delivered within 3 - 5 days from payment received. The lead-time for orders from the factory in Morocco is 8 - 12 weeks. Express orders can be delivered in 6-7 weeks with an additional cost.

Prices are available on the website, and in most cases include freight. From outside Denmark, the prices will be without 25% Danish VAT. See more on marokk.dk
